Concord, CA USA — Formtek, Inc. and Nuxeo Corp. today announced a strategic partnership that establishes Formtek as a strategic US partner and global reseller of the Nuxeo platform.

Nuxeo is the force behind the Nuxeo Platform, an open source Enterprise Content Management Platform that is highly customizable for building business applications and managing digital assets. Formtek has over thirty years of experience implementing document and content management solutions in some of the most demanding environments, including aerospace, defense, government, engineering and manufacturing. Formtek's expertise includes meeting the complex requirements associated with managing engineering drawings and the associated technical data supporting the engineering release process.

"As we embark on this strategic partnership our near term goal is to provide consulting, analysis, configuration, and implementation services around the deployment of the Nuxeo Platform," said Gary P. Mann, Chairman and CEO for Formtek. "This includes providing technical services and custom software in support of content repository system migration. Longer term, our goal is to provide complete packaged solutions, for example, bundling our engineering data management software with Nuxeo Online Services subscriptions."

"Formtek has a long history of successfully delivering document and content management solutions, particularly to engineering-driven organizations," said Brendan Coveney, Chief Revenue Officer for Nuxeo. "Their knowledge and experience, particularly with the industrial market segment, will help Nuxeo continue to deliver effective solutions and expand our reach within this growing market."
